Australians For Political Honesty

SMH article 'Tricks of the Trade' by Mike Seccombe (30-31 August 2003, News review p31)

Claims:

- "Establishing the connections is made difficult by the AEC, the body which oversees political funding, which appears not to have done its job in this case."
- Latrobe University Law Lecturer Joo-Cheong Tham: "Abbott should have had to reveal the identities of the donors to the trust had the AEC been doing its job."
- [Joo-Cheong Tham]: "I wonder about the Commission's actions. They appear not to have chased it up. It's quite extraordinary. I think the Commission made a error of judgement, not a loophole in the law."
- [Faulkner re Seyffer and work for Liberal Party]: "Mr Seyffer's work was clearly research for the Liberal party on Paul Keating." Nothing came of it. [Seccombe]
- Once again, many experts agreed with Faulkner that the AEC should have acted. There are those within the opposition who believe that the commission, like much of the rest of the federal bureaucracy has been captured by the government.
- [Andrew Murray] "The AEC is not a classic regulator, and yet in these matters it's required to be a regulator. It's far too reactive and not proactive. The AEC needs to be far more active in its regulatory role and not just its election management role."
- Claim that AEC was asked by Faulkner re Abbott at Estimates last year and we said we had not considered it: [Seccombe] "Yet it had clearly considered it and given Abbott the go-ahead. And in a formal response to a question on notice arising from the hearing, the AEC said "it would be worthwhile seeking formal legal advice on the matter". Yet it has not released any advice. To the cynical, this might look like a cover up. Certainly, the government did not want Abbott's activities publicized.
- [Seccombe] "Abbott and his fellow travelers have now driven a wedge between government and a million One Nation sympathizers. And possibly, if the electoral commission ever finds its nerve, exposed their secret donors to public scrutiny."

Hi Phil,

AAP story as discussed.
cheers,

Fed: AEC reviewing Australians for Honest Politics Hanson AEC

CANBERRA, Aug 27 AAP - The Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) today said it would review its decision that federal minister Tony Abbott's anti-One Nation fund was not associated with the Liberal Party.

Mr Abbott established the $100,000 Australians for Honest Politics trust fund in 1998 to challenge the validity of One Nation in the courts.

The AEC queried Mr Abbott about the fund after he declared it in his register of interests held by parliament.

Under the Electoral Act, political parties have to disclose the sources of their funding to the AEC. Mr Abbott avoided disclosing the names of donors to the fund, or the size of their contributions, because the AEC ruled the donations were not party-political.

"In 1998, we believed that the Australians for Honest Politics group was not an associated entity of the Liberal Party," an AEC spokesman said.

"As new information is emerging and this matter is progressing, we're looking at the situation, but we've got no further comment than that.

"We're looking at maintaining a watching brief on this issue as its being brought forward, and we'll review the situation."

The AEC would not say whether it had been approached to review the trust or been given new evidence.

"We don't have any comment to make on correspondence or anything of that nature," the spokesman said.

Mr Abbott said the trust's campaign to undermine One Nation in the courts had not been to benefit the Liberals.

"I thought it was in Australia's national interest that the Pauline Hanson political juggernaut be stopped," he told the John Laws Show.

The opposition has demanded that Mr Abbott publicly name the donors.

its not new, obtained after estimates last year)

Mr [redacted] indicated that an FOI request for the Australians for Political Honesty file (mentioned in our Harradine list of files on web site) will come in this afternoon to PAMS.

I have tried to push the line today that we are monitoring the situation. Getting more questions about when we will come to a decision (said don't know).

had best questions: (1) were their precedents (basically no, look on caes by case basis) (2) If we find AFPH were an associated entity, had Abbott acted illeagly - I said that in general terms if it came of our attention that an individual or group had disclosure repsonibilities, our first task was to seek compliance.

Folks

Spoke to [redacted] from the Fin Review

I advised her:

- of the definition of associated entity in the CEA
- that the process for the AEC determining whether an organisation is an associated entity and

- therefore, has a disclosure obligation is an information gathering one
- that determining whether an organisation is an associated entity is done on a case by case basis and will vary according to the organisation
  - that in determining whether an organisation is an associated entity we need to look at the organisation, how it was set up, why it was set up, how it operates, who is involved in it, etc
  - that the sorts of information we would gather might include such things as trust deeds, minutes of meetings, financial records, objectives of the organisation, who runs the organisation, etc
  - that information gathering may include actually talking to people but definitely involves looking at documents
  - that we have a policy of looking at issues that are raised in public fora such as the media and that there is nothing which prevents us from re-considering an issue and that, yes, this means that we are looking at this current issue
  - that we have quite extensive powers to gather information under the provisions of s316 of the CEA which even extend to getting warrants to seize documents etc

Colleagues

The attached media statement is being posted on the AEC web site as we speak. In addition, I expect a letter under Paul Dacey's signature will go to the editor of the Sydney Morning Herald regarding Mike Seccombe's article in Saturday's paper about the AEC role in the current 'debate' about Australians for Honest Politics Trust.

Electoral disclosure obligations MR (1 September 2003)

I am happy to discuss further if needed.

MEDIA RELEASE*Electoral Disclosure Obligations

Electoral Commissioner Andy Becker today clarified a number of matters related to the role of the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC) and recent media coverage of the Australians for Honest Politics Trust.

"When this matter was first raised five years ago, the AEC determined at that time that the group Australians for Honest Politics was not an associated entity as specified by the Commonwealth Electoral Act," Mr Becker said.

The Electoral Act stipulates that an associated entity is an organisation set up to benefit a registered political party.

Mr Becker said that when any new information came to light, it was given careful consideration, but a knee-jerk reaction to a complex issue was inappropriate.

The Commissioner emphasised the AEC's role as an independent statutory authority and said it will consider all the issues in a measured and deliberate way.

"We are charged with ensuring that the disclosure requirements of the Electoral Act are met, even when this involves seemingly knowledgeable and articulate groups."

"The AEC is a politically neutral organisation charged with monitoring the disclosure obligations of all players in the political process and will do so without fear or favour," Mr Becker said.

Dear Editor

I wish to address certain matters raised by Mike Secombe ("Tricks of the trade", Herald, August 30-31) regarding the Australians for Honest Politics Trust and by Margo Kingston (Herald website, 1 September).

When this matter was first raised five years ago, the AEC determined at that time the group was not an associated entity as specified by the Commonwealth Electoral Act. The Act clearly stipulates that an associated entity is an organisation set up to benefit a registered political party.

When any new information comes to light the AEC gives it careful consideration, but an impulsive reaction to what is a complex issue is inappropriate. There is an important difference between being 'tardy' and acting in a deliberate and measured way.

In regards to the claim that the AEC has not been 'frank' on this issue, the AEC's well-regarded transparency in electoral matters is not always obvious when following the due and fair processes that such complex issues demand.

The AEC is an independent statutory authority charged with ensuring that the disclosure requirements of the Electoral Act are met, even when this involves seemingly high profile and articulate groups.

As a politically neutral organisation, the AEC will continue to monitor the disclosure obligations of all players in the political process without fear or favour.

Subject: Enquiry by . SMH re Abbott and PHON

Further to . call at lunch time, he rang again and referred to the Hansard of 30 May 2002 where the AEC was questioned by Sen Faulkner re whether Mr Abbott's involvement in the Sharples/Hanson matter was a disclosable matter and we said we would get a legal opinion. He asked if we had got that opinion and what it said.

After discussion with Brad, Doug and Tim P, I rang . back and advised him that we do not comment on our legal advice (either content or whether we had actually sought it in the first place). He said that he understood that we would not comment on the content, but was surprised that we would not say what whether we had sought an opinion or not.

He then rang back to say that he had talked to Tony Abbott who had received a letter from the AEC in 1999 asking whether he would disclose details of his support for Australians For Honest Politics. . said that Abbott said that he (Abbott) wrote back to the AEC and that his answer that he did not have disclosure obligations was accepted. Seccombe wanted a copy of this letter. I talked to Doug and rang . back and said that we did not release copies of correspondence to third parties. I said that if Mr Abbott wanted to release a letter he had from the AEC, that was matter for him, but that we would not.

He was not happy with this and said he would write about it in tomorrow's paper (presumably about being 'stonewalled' - my word, not his)
