Australia caught in the middle of a diplomatic stoush

By William Briggs

19 December 2020

Australia is in the crosshairs of the power battle being waged between China and the U.S. (image by Dan Jensen)

As 2020 becomes 2021, one thing remains ominously certain: the Australia-U.S. alliance will continue to threaten the peace of the region and Australia's economic security.

Australia's anti-China stance is set to continue, regardless of cost.

If anything, even remotely like a real threat existed, then the alliance might be a good idea. But, since 1951 and ANZUS, Australia has been sending troops and spending billions of dollars in support of a range of aggressive U.S. military adventures. Any objective analysis will show that no threat has ever been evident.

China is the latest confected threat but as a Chinese Embassy statement of November 16 said:

"If you make China the enemy, China will be the enemy".

Can the It wis racipatifior that is exact such an enemy? remembering. America is not about to relinquish its "leadership in Trade has it earned that stillate in its intering them the front line confustly rewring deeph birth i a sadu. This Xijin, editor in robe in so such stillate in the sadu. This bluntly partistralian political leaders, be they Coalition or Labor, consider themselves captives to American 'China-Australia relations will hardly pick policy objectives up and Australia will continue to pay for its unreasonable China policy.'

On the contrary, they are more than Australiavisling panitmentains the one-sided extraordinary conteints if tooliem to think think a our leading thanking due to deal and the entire of the conteints in the contract thanks a our leading thanking else is to risk the ire of an enormously powerful The Governmentes bely is elected ally it ude is threatening billions of dollars in trade. 30% of our trade is exittingly is a light incharge 13 Australiatajous of Aelistralian appreciations with Chinae if chaire is ly own in the Whistralian way hous tradit per aps will smould enough that a way hous trade elsewhere i-American is to risk investment dollars; nearly 26% of all investment. It also means making an

There appeared to mask popularies foation goods correctly provided by Australia. There are other primary producers in the world buttitue same time at the thesi by any producemeanth or singulation of solonly seites upon for advivably the prising power are the idal policy, the iboth while adjustic the interesting the our alliance wath the line and the interest the idas absurbed.

claim, but then the notion of states Capitalishec'onationed indeprestiriscenand on foreign indestruits. Chinese investment in Australia ustratia esteventheorhew dergischetichs that has dieglischendtt sieren se perpanere ties just 2%. Everain tote audotheologskonzintathen grits, the totalsispicenta of war the australia of the australia of the Global

Times correctly described

The Amaristratidia verbiev to weeds Cohiala autreminding reastrationele acles so of this tylest n

Washington and Beijing will U.S. Secontainy of Statta; plaike Pompeo, made things very clear in May when he let it be knowld. So poother UsShregtended, and engage inieta; yosh Awastratiat'a food trugito Whein is. He sugglast gentbrast. the sufficient Slian's grad trugito Whein is. He sugglast gentbrast. the sufficient Slian's grad trugito Whein is. He sugglast gentbrast. the sufficient Slian's grad trugito Whein is. He sugglast gentbrast. the sufficient Slian's grad trugito Whein is. He sugglast gentbrast that we have any arrangements with China that were deemed to be not in accord with America's "national security White asst Sliggs is a political"

economist with special interest In other aveaus inpltyeoficials of political theory and international political economy. His latest book, China, Pompective USP eakidg Capitalister's wast he also Crussade will the published by Zero Books in mid-2021.

"Every nation has its own sovereign right to make decisions for itself and I suppose Victoria has some rights ... but every citizen of Australia should know that every one of those Belt and Road projects needs to be looked at incredibly closely."

This, of course, is not "bullying". Bullying is what China does. The U.S. engages in "robust diplomacy".

U.S. Ambassador Arthur Culvahouse saw the need to further clarify things:

"We have every confidence that Australia, as a close ally and Five Eyes partner, would take every measure necessary to ensure the security of its telecommunications networks."

The Australian Government got the message.

The incoming U.S. President has been equally unambiguous when he let the world and the Asia-Pacific region know that America is "back" and would be leading the world.

Against such a background of hostility and threat, Australia becomes a virtual captive of its relationship with the U.S. This alliance has been effectively set in concrete by successive Australian governments since the signing of the ANZUS treaty.

It is most usually considered first and foremost in military terms. It is often used to describe joint defence in times of trouble.

Hugh White in his How to Defend Australia makes the point that:

'America has remained our ally for so long because the alliance has cost it very little, and it has helped support America's leadership in Asia.'